This directory is intended for general information and guidance for educators in penal institutions. In compiling the directory, questionnaires were sent to 364 state and 28 federal penal institutions in the United States. Responses were received from 257 state institutions comprising all 50 states and from all 28 federal institutions. It has been assumed that 107 state institutions which did not respond have no vocational training programs. These 107 institutions are for the most part small camps. farms or centers with less than 100 population. The institutions that reported and are listed account for over 225,000 of the 230,000 inmate population in the United States. It is therefore felt that the institutions listed represent nearly all those offering vocational training. The directory is presented in three sections: Part One, Listing of Institutions Comprising Directory, Part Two, Institutions Offering Training by Vocational Area, and Part Three, Vocational Training Offered by Individual Institutions. A study of the relationship between these programs and the unfilled job openings in the major occupations of the United States is available as ED 025 598. (CH)

FOREWORD

This directory is intended for general information and guidance to penal educators. It is hoped that it will prove of value in stimulating ideas and suggestions between those of us responsible for developing curricula that will meet local as well as national standards for employment and manpower utilization.

In compiling this directory, questionnaires were sent to 364 state and 28 federal penal institutions in the United States. Responses were received from 257 state institutions, comprising all 50 states, and from all 28 federal institutions. It has been assumed that the 107 state institutions which did not respond have no vocational training programs. These 107 institutions are, for the most part, small camps, farms, or centers with less than 100 population. The institutions that reported and are listed account for over 225,000 of the 230,000 inmate population in the U.S. It is therefore felt that the institutions listed represent nearly all those offering vocational training.

Because of local differences, there are undoubtedly some definition or interpretation discrepancies inherent within the directory. For example, juvenile and youth tended to overlap to such an extent that it was decided to make only two categories of offenders rather than three: adult and youth. However, even here there is inconsistency, some states recognizing those over 16 as adult, others those over 18, etc. To an extent this is also true in interpretation of individual vocational training areas.

This directory has been made possible through the aid furnished by the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. For this aid I am pleased to make grateful acknowledgement to Mr. M. E. Alexander, Director, Bureau of Prisons, and to Mr. John T. Willingham, Warden, Leavenworth, Kansas. Also, I wish to express my gratitude to Dr. Ben S. Vineyard, Kansas State College, Pittsburg, Kansas, for his many suggestions, to Raymond Johnson, Leavenworth data processing instructor for the help in arranging the returns in a useable form, and to all the responding agencies without whose contributions this directory would not have been possible.
